Am Donnerstag haben Fields of the Nephilim in einem durch "7 Management" bestätigtem Statement bekanntgegeben, dass die für Herbst angesetzte UK/Europa-Tour nicht stattfinden wird. Die Tourdates für Fields of the Nephilim, Garden of Delight und Nosferatu werden aktualisiert, sobald feststeht, dass die Konzerte komplett abgesagt oder verschoben werden.

Derzeit werden die Möglichkeiten für Nachholtermine Anfang 2007 geprüft. Die genauen Gründe lassen sich dem Statement von Carl McCoy allerdings nicht entnehmen, aber in der Vegrangenheit hat man ja über Fields schon eines gelernt: Die Wege des Carl sind unergründlich.

Das offizielle Statement:

Sad news today, which has been confirmed by 7 Management:

"Due to external factors beyond the band's control, 7 Management are disappointed to have to announce that Fields of the Nephilim are unable to commit to the proposed UK and European tour under the circumstances currently prevailing. This has been a decision only reached after much anguish and debate, and has been made with the long term interests of both the band and their loyal followers. Carl McCoy would like to make the following personal statement to the band's fans, who we are sure will be bitterly disappointed at this unwelcome news. 'With 2006 having been such a positive year for both me and the band, foregoing the opportunity to meet up with fans new and old has come as a bitter blow to me both personally and professionally. I am sure the unforeseen difficulties that have led to the cancellation will be resolved, and I look forward to the possibility of making fresh plans for early next year. Getting the band back on the road has been an ambition of mine for some considerable time, but I feel it would be an injustice to our incredibly loyal fan base to continue under the present circumstances.' On behalf of both Fields of the Nephilim, and ourselves, 7 Management would like to sincerely apologise for having to announce such disappointing news."
